What is Vegan Wine?

Fining agents are often used in winemaking to clarify and even help soften or reduce a wine's astringency or bitterness. Traditionally, the most commonly used were casein (a milk protein), albumin (egg whites), gelatin (animal protein), and isinglass (fish bladder protein). While these are not additives, and are filtered out during the winemaking process, some traces can be left behind.

At Mendocino Wine Company we use non-animal based fining agents, making most of our wines suitable for vegan consumers.
